JOMO – Joy of Missing Out are monthly interdisciplinary expert talks on art and culture: physical, live-streamed and digitally archived. It is organized by Christian Bazant-Hegemark, Julia Bugram und Paula Marschalek.

JOMO stands for more transparency in the art industry and offers a contemporary, open approach to topics that tend to go unmentioned in the art world. At each event, two experts take up „their“ topic and discuss it through questions from the audience - whereby the „joy of missing out“ is constitutive for the format.

JOMO is aimed at both artists and other people working in the field: gallery owners, collectors, art writers/journalists etc. Only in the collaboration of the different professional sectors and interest groups, it is possible to improve the „status quo“ of contemporary art practice: through transparency, openness, and honesty.
